

I think that someone's mindset can be crucial to their success. If someone goes into something with a strong can do mindset then they will be ahead of someone who lacks that confidence. I think that this begins in the early stages of childhood growth. Little ways of congratulating a young one can further lead to how their mindset becomes. I got a result of 37 which means I have a growth mindset but with some fixed ideas. While taking the quiz I found myself thinking about those around me, comparing the answers to friends and experiences with them and trying to decide if they have a growth mindset or a fixed mindset. I think that is something important to know about someone and how they work. I will definitely pay more attention to that when talking to people so I know what to expect from them.
